IN FOCUS: Strengthening Epidemic Response Through Research and Data-sharing

The COVID-19 pandemic has led to investments in Nigeria's molecular laboratory network with at least one laboratory with the capacity to test for COVID-19 in each state. These laboratories also serve as hubs for research and data-sharing. They contribute significantly to strengthening of Nigeria's response to epidemics and pandemics, and ultimately overall national health security.

A key component of research and data-sharing is ensuring proper storage of human and animal biological samples including blood and its by-products, biofluids, genetic material and pathogens. Recently, the Nigeria Centre for Disease Control and Prevention (NCDC) in collaboration with the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (US-CDC) and the Institute for Human Virology, Nigeria (IHVN) commissioned a biorepository laboratory at the Central Public Health Laboratory (CPHL) in Lagos State. A well-equipped biorepository promotes quality research as well as the timely sharing of biological specimens and data for activities such as training, confirmation of proficiency, etc.

Better understanding of infectious diseases like COVID-19 allows for increased detection and response to emerging and re-emerging disease outbreaks as well as the development of diagnostics, therapeutics, and vaccines. We call on State Ministries of Health to sustain the strengthening of COVID-19 response through investments in research and data-sharing at the state and local government area (LGA) level.

The NCDC remains committed to data-driven decision-making for response to COVID-19 pandemic as well as other disease outbreaks.
